An Introduction

In this age of artificial fibers and performance textiles, there is still something undeniably appealing about handmade fabrics created from authentic natural fibers, which retain their original organic appeal.

At IAN SAUDE our primary focus is on natural yarns – often spun by hand from fibers in their original, native colors – enhanced by artisan looming, dyeing, and finishing techniques to lend them a unique point of view. With an emphasis on tactile fibers like cashmere and silk, linen and bamboo, our hand-spinning and hand-loomed techniques conspire to create accessories that are sumptuous in their simplicity.

Comfort is always one of our primary considerations. Our accessories must not only look good, they also need to feel good— conveying a sense of nurturing and reassurance while still being fun and easy to wear.

About

Working for decades in the Himalayan cashmere industry, Ian has developed numerous branded accessory collections for his own company, as well as spearheading a number of private label projects for other well-known designers.

Over time, having worked on styles ranging from heavily embellished evening wear pieces to classic knits and wovens, his primary focus remains on styles that convey an honesty of materials and express a sense of understated artisan luxury.
